CORAM : HONOURABLE MR.JUSTICE P.B.MAJMUDAR

Date : 14/06/2006

ORAL JUDGMENT

1. By filing this petition, the petitioner detenu has challenged his detention order dated 15.11.2005 by which the petitioner is detained as a Bootlegger under preventive detention by resorting to the provisions of the Gujarat Prevention of Anti-Social Activities Act, 1985 [hereinafter referred to as PASA Act]. The detaining authority found that the petitioner is a bootlegger and therefore his activities are prejudicial to public health.

2. In the grounds of detention, there is a reference of four pending criminal cases registered against the petitioner. It is required to be noted that all these cases are registered at Makarpura Police Station under the provisions of the Bombay Prohibition Act, and it is alleged that the petitioner is dealing in country liquor and such activities are injuries to public health and because of the said activities public order also may be disturbed. The detaining authority, after having been satisfied subjectively, has passed the aforesaid detention order.

3. Learned advocate for the petitioner submitted that except the pending criminal cases, the detaining authority has not relied upon any other material, nor statement of any witness is recorded to show that the activities of the petitioner is prejudicial to public health. It is submitted by the learned advocate for the petitioner that registering of criminal cases against the petitioner can at the most be said to be an act of violation of law, and not public order. It is submitted that there is no credible material on record to show that the activities of the petitioner is prejudicial to public health or that by the said activities even tempo of the Society was disturbed in any manner.

4. Mr. N.D. Gohil, learned Assistant Government Pleader submitted that the petitioner is dealing in country liquor and by the said activities, public health and public order will be disturbed. He further submitted that in the instant case, FSL Report is also obtained and as per the report, the commodity in which the petitioner was dealing with contained consumable alcoholic substances which can be used for intoxication.

5. It is not in dispute that there are no statements of any independent witnesses which are recorded by the detaining authority. Except three cases which are registered against the detenu under the provisions of the Prohibition Act there is no other material against the petitioner.

6. Learned advocate for the petitioner has relied upon judgment of a Division Bench of this Court, [Coram: M.R. Calla & R.R. Tripathi, JJ.] in its judgment and order dated 22.08.2000 in the case of Ashok Balabhai Makwana v/s. State of Gujarat in LPA No. 223 of 2000 held as under in paragraph 5 of the judgment:

> “If we examine the present case on the anvil of the test which has been applied by the Supreme Court in the case of K.S. Zala v. State of Gujarat

(supra), i.e. with regard to the presence of credible material and as to how the detaining authority has made the mention against the appellant being an obstruction to the public health and public order, we find that in the instant case so far as the statements of the witnesses which were recorded with regard to unregistered cases, that ground has been rejected by the learned Single Judge himself. It is, of course, true that after narrating the particulars of the criminal cases, the detaining authority has mentioned that the activities of the appellant were an obstacle to the public health and public order, but this bald observation cannot be taken to be decisive so as to arrive at the satisfaction that the activities of the petitioner were prejudicial to the public order or public health and that tempo of public life was disturbed. No observation made in any part of the judgement can be read in isolation and bereft the context. The judgement is to be read as a whole and even the observations which have been made by the Supreme Court in para 6 of the judgement are to be considered in light of the earlier observations made in para 5 where presence of credible material before the detaining authority has been insisted upon. Thus, litmus test to find out as to whether it is a case of breach of public order or breach of public health is concerned, credible material has to be there. In the case of K.S. Zala before the Supreme Court, the detaining authority had also relied upon the statements of the witnesses so as to show that violence resorted to by the petitioner in that case had disturbed the even tempo of public life and the material on record had shown that members of the public of those localities had to run away from there and to go inside their houses and to close their doors. No such fact situation has been mentioned in the present case and the ground with regard to the statements of the three witnesses has been rejected by the learned Single Judge himself and it has been held that there had been violation or infringement of the petitioner's right against such statements. In this view of the matter whatsoever said by the three witnesses with regard to unregistered cases and with regard to the three incidents referred to hereinabove, it cannot be considered to be the material germane for the purpose of consideration of the threat to the public health and public order. Thus, the only material which remains is the registered criminal cases and that by itself cannot be said to be a material for the purpose of holding that the appellant's activities had become a threat to the public order and public health. Necessary material in this regard is totally wanting in the body of the detention order itself. In large number of cases, the Supreme Court has considered that involvement in bootlegging activities even if coupled with violence does not amount to threat to public order or public health. The mere mention of allegations unless they are supported by any material cannot be said to be material germane for the purpose of arriving at the satisfaction with regard to breach of public order or public health and we find that after giving particulars of criminal cases, the detaining authority by including certain allegations, not supported by any credible material has simply observed that the appellant's activities were an obstacle to the public health and public order. In this view of the mater keeping in view the observations made by the > Supreme Court in the case of K.S. Zala v. State of Gujarat (supra) itself in paras 4 and 5, we do not find that it can be held to be a case of breach of public health and public order. Learned counsel for the appellant has also argued several other points before us, but we do not find it necessary to go into those grounds. It may be mentioned that it was not a case of breach of public order or public health and it was not argued before the learned Single Judge. Even if that be so, in such matters, the point which arises on the face of the facts of the case by the body of the order itself, which does not require further investigation of the facts, can certainly be allowed to be raised and we allow learned counsel for the appellant to raise this point and find that this point is not without substance. The impugned order passed by the learned single Judge upholding the detention order therefore, cannot be said to be in consonance with the settled position of law. The detention order deserves to be quashed and set aside on this ground alone. We, therefore, do not go into other grounds which were raised on behalf of the appellants."

7. Considering the aforesaid aspect as well as considering the fact that there is no material finding place on the record worth the name even in the form of statement of witnesses to show that the activities of the petitioner are such which will be prejudicial to public health, at the most it can be said that the activities of the petitioner is in breach of law and order, and not public order.

8. For the reasons recorded above, and more particularly in view of the judgment of the learned

Single Judge referred to hereinabove, this petition is allowed. Order of detention dated 15.11.2005 passed against the petitioner is quashed and set aside. The petitioner is ordered to be released forthwith unless he is required in connection with any other offence. Rule is made absolute, with no order as to costs.

9. At this stage, learned advocate for the detenu voluntarily states that in case the detenu is released on bail in connection with the pending case, the detenu will will not enter the area of enter Baroda District till 30th September 2006. This voluntary statement of learned advocate for the petitioner is recorded. It is for the Learned Additional Public Prosecutor to inform the concerned authorities about this voluntary statement. If any bail application is preferred even thereafter, it will be open to the authorities to resist the same in accordance with law.
